Before You Send Anything

Most cold emails fail not because of the template — but because of what comes before it.

01

Find the right person first.

Don't spray-and-pray. Search '[Company] HR' or '[Company] Talent Acquisition' on LinkedIn. Your email hits harder when it reaches someone with actual hiring power.

02

Personalise before you paste.

Every template has [BRACKETS]. Fill them in fully. One generic detail (like 'your company') kills the entire email. Spend 3 minutes on their LinkedIn or company page first.

03

One email. One ask.

Don't attach your resume + portfolio + reference letters in email #1. The only ask in a cold email is: a 10-minute call, or a reply. That's it.

04

Follow up once — on Day 5.

If no reply in 5 days, send one follow-up. Just 2 lines: refer to your first email + repeat your ask softly. Don't chase after that.

Quick Do's & Don'ts

- ✓ DO Use the subject lines EXACTLY as given — they're written to get opens
- ✓ DO Keep the email body under 100 words
- ✓ DO Mention one specific thing about the company — not generic praise
- ✗ DON'T Open with 'I am writing to apply for...' — instant delete
- ✗ DON'T Copy-paste without personalising the [BRACKETS]
- ✗ DON'T Send the same email to 50 HRs at once — they can tell

You Saw a Job Opening

WHEN TO USE

Use when the company has an active job posting and you want to reach the HR directly instead of applying through a portal.

SUBJECT LINE: Quick question re: [Role Name] opening at [Company]

EMAIL BODY

Hi [HR First Name],

I came across the [Role Name] opening at [Company] and wanted to reach out directly — I noticed [one specific thing about the company, e.g. your recent expansion into fintech / your open-source work].

[One sentence: your most relevant experience or result]

e.g. I've spent 3 years building data pipelines at scale for a fintech startup.

I'd love a 10-minute call to see if there's a fit.

My resume: [LinkedIn URL or attach]

Thanks,

[Your Name] | [Your Phone Number]

WHY THIS WORKS:

Subject creates curiosity without being clickbait. Mentioning something specific about the company shows you're not copy-pasting. The ask is tiny

No Active Opening (Speculative)

WHEN TO USE

Use when you want to get your foot in the door at a company even without a visible job posting. Works great for fast-growing startups and c

SUBJECT LINE: [Your Role] with [X years] exp — open to opportunities at [Company]?

EMAIL BODY

Hi [HR First Name],

I've been following [Company] for a while — [specific reason:

e.g. loved how you scaled ops post the Series B / your product work on X].

I'm a [Your Title] with [X years] in [Your Domain].

[One line result: e.g. Last role — reduced hiring TAT by 40% for a 500-person team.]

If there's an opportunity coming up that could be a fit, I'd love to be on your radar. Happy to send my resume — just say the word.

[Your Name] | [LinkedIn URL]

WHY THIS WORKS:

The subject line does the heavy lifting — it states your value proposition instantly. 'Happy to send my resume — just say the word' is low pressure

You Have a Mutual Connection

WHEN TO USE

Use when a friend, ex-colleague, or LinkedIn connection works at or knows someone at the company. Even a weak connection bumps you

SUBJECT LINE: [Mutual Name] suggested I reach out — [Role] at [Company]

EMAIL BODY

Hi [HR First Name],

[Mutual's Name] suggested I reach out to you directly.

I'm exploring [Role/Domain] roles and [Company] has been on my list for a while — [one specific reason why this company, not generic].

Quick background: [Your Title], [X years], [one standout result].

e.g. Built and led a 12-person QA team from scratch at a Series A startup.

Would love 10 minutes of your time if there's anything in the pipeline.

Thanks,

[Your Name] | [Phone] | [LinkedIn URL]

WHY THIS WORKS:

Mutual name in the subject line makes the HR pause before deleting. Keep the body short — the referral does 80% of the trust-building. Your job is
